Self-identity in Adulthood/Interdependent Want To Participate

The independent adult continues to grow in self-identity and the belief that “I have something to contribute”, becomes that of “I want to participate.”

The “I” becomes a “We” and interdependency happens!

Interdependency happens whenever two adults who have true self-identity mutually exchange creativity, compassion, and support and empower each other with attention, respect, and appreciation.

Self-Identity remains intact, and the perspective of equality becomes the cornerstone of the adult relationship.
